Midtown shop to showcase local author and artist

Modern home goods shop celebrates Noel Night with book-signing and art opening

Detroit, MI – Detroit’s newest modern home goods shop, Bureau of Urban Living, is pleased to celebrate Noel Night on Saturday, December 1st with extended hours for holiday shopping, a book-signing by local author Linda McLean, and the debut of a new exhibit of Detroit photographs by award-winning photographer Stephen McGee.

- Holiday Shopping (11 AM – 9 PM)

Headed to Noel Night? Stop by our shop on West Canfield Street, just steps from Traffic Jam & Snug Restaurant and Motor City Brewery in Detroit’s University Cultural District. We’ll have cider flowing and holiday tunes playing while you browse our bins for clever gifts, cool cards, and colorful gift wrap!

- Book Signing (5-7 PM)

Local author Linda McLean will be on-hand to sign copies of her colorful new picture book, “The Heidelberg Project: A Street of Dreams.” A perfect holiday gift for Detroiters of all ages, Linda’s book includes beautiful images and poetry that bring Tyree Guyton’s art to life. All ages welcome!

- Art Opening (7-9 PM)

Be the first to view a new series of breathtaking Detroit images by Emmy award-winning documentary photographer Stephen McGee. The photographer will be on hand to discuss his work, which will be available for sale at Bureau of Urban Living through the end of December.

Bureau of Urban Living is open Tuesdays-Saturdays, 11 AM – 7 PM at 460 W. Canfield Street in Midtown Detroit, across from Traffic Jam & Snug Restaurant. A modern-day general store for city dwellers, the shop offers modern home goods and gifts by local and international designers. For a map and directions, please visit www.bureauliving.com.
